Allegan Sets Fair Opening Next Monday

ALLEGAN—There may be more truth than poetry in a line of an old song that goes "Oh how I wish again, I was a kid again, back on the farm."

Officials of the Allegan County Fair scheduled to open next Monday, Sept. 9, announce that the Farmers' Museum, a free exhibit shown for the first time last year, met with such enthusiasm they have expanded display space for this year's showing of pioneer farm tools and equipment.

In addition, it is planned to show many more old fashioned household items once used by women in farm homes, according to John Pahl, well known Allegan county historian and chairman of the Farmers' Museum.

Pahl said the exhibit was "successful far beyond our expectations last year", adding that 15,000 people, by actual count, viewed the display the first few days of the fair. "After that, assured of success, we stopped counting."

Farmers' Museum attendants will be wearing authentic pioneer farm clothing this year, according to Pahl.

Ray Starback, Pullman, in charge of gathering items for the museum throughout Allegan county, has come up with some unusual articles for this year. One of the first sewing machines ever used around here has been loaned by Frederic Hilbert Sr., Wayland, father of state senator Frederic Hilbert.

A large private collection of pioneer farm tools which drew a lot of attention at last year's exhibit will again be on display. They were donated by Willis Parmalee and his brother, the late Lewis Parmalee of the well known pioneer Hopkins family.

The Farmers' Museum is a part of a larger segment of the Allegan County Fair called the Farm-O-Rama, a sort of "fair within a fair", where prize animals will be judged, "barnyard children" have their own "nursery" and many more things of interest to farmers are on display.

LABOR DAY PASSES

The death toll with 549 traffic fatalities over the United States has set another record. We wonder when we, the people, will learn that more careful planning is necessary when it comes to SAFETY.

Labor Day, originally established almost three quarters of a century ago by people in the unions in recognition of labor, appears to have lost some of its original significance. Labor has come a long way since the post World War I decade when Vice - President Charles Curtis "cited as a dangerous manifestation of radicalism in the women's colleges the fact that the girl debaters of Radcliffe had upheld the affirmative in an intercollegiate debate on the subject, 'Resolved, that the recognition of labor unions by employers is essential to collective bargaining.'"

So says Frederick Allen in his book, "Only Yesterday." Today, the right to organize and bargain collectively is more or less accepted as commonplace. Today many people have come to look upon Labor Day as one last holiday before the opening of fall activities such as the Mardi Gras in New Orleans, La., is considered one last fling before Lent.

Perhaps a second reason for a change in the significance of Labor Day may simply be the fact that the celebration of it should not be confined to that segment of our society known as Labor. For there is an increasing recognition of the dignity of all labor — clerical, professional as well as manual. Except for the occasional misfit who's obviously in the wrong job, most well-adjusted individuals enjoy their work, derive a psychological satisfaction from it, and would be lost without it. Incidentally, aside from the inability to provide for life's necessities, that's what makes our unemployment problem so serious for those willing and able to work but unable to find it.

We certainly don't mean to imply that Labor Day has changed in significance because all problems arising from the capital-labor relationship have been settled. But we've come to recognize that these problems are not the exclusive concern of Capital or Labor but are those with which the entire country must wrestle. Many problems remain such as automation, longer life, unemployment, an economy geared to high production which could create more problems. There is still a lot of unfinished business. There always will be. But as David Lillenthal, first director of the Atomic Energy Commission, once said so aptly: "... any person who wants to live a peaceful, quiet, uneventful life has just picked the wrong time to live."

Sunday School Lesson

Rejected By His Brothers
Genesis 37:17
By C. P. Dame
Joseph, the son of Jacob, is one of the most winsome characters in the Bible. Three lessons are devoted to the study of this man of God whose life has been an inspiration to many young people.

As we study these lessons we will be impressed by the way God led him in the midst of all the trials which overtook him.

I. Dreamers are often important. Jacob had twelve sons but he loved Joseph the son of his favorite wife Rachel most of all. Unwisely Jacob showed his favoritism openly. He gave Joseph a robe with sleeves which indicated that he was somewhat of a foreman. This made his brothers jealous. Besides Joseph brought an ill report of his brothers to Jacob. Evidently his father had given him a responsibility as an overseer and so it was his duty to give a report.

In reality the brothers disliked Joseph because he by his clean and upright living condemned their crooked way of life. Joseph would not conform to their mode of life.

It was not wise on the part of Joseph to tell his brothers about his dreams which predicted a great future for him. Undoubtedly these dreams encouraged Joseph later on in life. It was not smart of the brothers to become jealous of Joseph. As older brothers they should have smiled at Joseph's dreams. Today we read and hear much about family problems and conflicts. They were also present in the days of Jacob and Joseph.

II. Jealousy hardens hearts. Jacob sent Joseph to look up his brothers who were shepherding the flocks. When the brothers saw him coming they began plotting how to kill him and nullify his dreams.

Reuben, the oldest son, persuaded the brothers to throw him into a pit. He wanted to save his life and planned to rescue him and bring him to his father again. When Reuben was absent Judah proposed selling Joseph to some traveling merchants, Ishmaelites, who were on the way to Egypt, which was done.

III. God uses all manner of things in his program. God wanted Joseph in Egypt for a great service.

Observe the various steps in the story. The brothers were made angry by the partiality of their father. The dreams of Joseph increased their anger and very likely made them afraid that they had prophetic significance. Jacob sent Joseph to find his brothers who had moved from Shechem to Dothan which was close to the route of the caravans going to Egypt which gave them an opportunity to contact the merchants. Reuben's suggestion to put Joseph in the pit rather than to kill him saved his life and Judah's idea to sell Joseph was carried out and thus Joseph was brought to Egypt where God wanted him.

The favoritism of the father, the folly of Joseph in telling about his dreams, the anger of the brothers, and their wicked deed all were used by God. Although God uses the sinful deeds of people he does not excuse them but holds them responsible. People who think that after they have committed a sin they are done with it are sadly mistaken.

The local board voted to support the resolution and to promote this legislation which will expand park facilities necessary to meet recreational demands and preserve the scenic beauty of this area.

Mrs. Don Burrows announced applications are available for Course 11 of the Flower Show School which will be held in Ludington Sept. 24 through 26. Mrs. Lang, president expressed her appreciation to Mrs. Edward Brolin who represented the Holland Garden Club with an invitational arrangement in the Muskegon Flower Show.

UNUSUAL LILY BLOOMS — Mrs. Edward Rush, 115 West 32nd St., thought there was something unusual about this flower which suddenly pushed three glossy, leafless stems through the soil and within a few days produced five or six blooms. As this was the second year in a row that the flower had bloomed in her garden, Mrs. Rush, who originally thought it was a weed, made a few inquiries. Mrs. Rush's flower answers the description of a lycoris squamiger, that is, a resurrection lily, as it is more commonly known. This unusual lily, writes Art Kozelka in his Chicago Tribune column "Home Garden," sends up heavy dark green leaves early in the spring which eventually die and vanish during the summer. Late in the season, usually in August, leafless flower stalks suddenly shot through the ground and within a matter of days reach a height of two or three feet. Orchid-pink delicately scented lilies bloom in clusters of five or six.

ROAD WIDENED — Neil & Al Kalkman Construction Co. crewmen continue laying curbing and widening Washington Ave. and expect to be finished in about a week when West Shore Construction Co. of Zeeland will take over to blacktop the five-lane expansion from 32nd St. south to about 500 feet north of 48th St. The stretch of road has been closed to through traffic most of the summer while crewmen laid drainage pipes, widened the road and laid curbing. This picture, looking north, shows the widened Washington Ave.

Weather May Delay Freeway

Weather could be a big factor in the exact opening date of the I-96 expressway from Holland to South Haven, Bill Kasip, road project engineer of the Michigan State Highway Department, said Wednesday.

"If we are cautiously optimistic," he said, "that stretch of I-96 should be completed by Nov. 30."

The completion date depends on whether the weather remains good enough to allow men to continue construction work. The Nov. 30 date excludes a five-mile stretch in the Saugatuck area which was delayed by a muck area in the Kalamazoo river.

Bad weather, however, could delay the paving of I-96 until next spring, Kasip said. Rain, and its drainage afterwards, prevents paving, and especially grading of roads. Clay, for example, collects rain and becomes plastic when wet and can not be graded. On the other hand, rain water may drain through sand because of its granularity. But it can also wash some of the graded sand away.

Contractors have been several weeks behind schedule in their work, Kasip said, because of a late start last spring. One delay was the heavy winter preceding the beginning of construction work. Paving should begin this month, however, provided the weather remains fine — "If we are cautiously optimistic," Kasip added again.

Construction workers are presently pushing to make two detour roads around the future interchange area at the US-31 and US-31 bypass intersection so they may work in that area, Kasip said.

One detour, which will eventually become a permanent road between US-31 and east 48th St., will be completed in about a week and a half. The detour will begin east of the bridge site in the southbound lane of the US-31 bypass, cut over to the northbound lane and then into the field where it will connect with US-31 near Mike's Service Station. The temporary route will be for two-way traffic.

Another detour will start about a thousand feet west of Washington Ave. (US-31) on 48th St., go north and wind around Howard Johnson's restaurant to Washington Ave.

The detours will allow men to pave an entrance ramp from Washington Ave to southbound traffic on I-96, and to tear up existing pavement under the future interchange bridge, from Vandenberg Motor Inc., at 1191 South Washington Ave., to Mike's Service Station south of the intersection. This area begins on the north where the city's widening of Washington Ave. terminates.

A detour already in existence is the one three miles north of Saugatuck where crewmen are working on another interchange. When completed, it will temporarily be used to reroute traffic from I-96 back onto US-31 for a five-mile stretch south of there while construction continues on I-96 in Saugatuck.

Because of a muck hole on the Kalamazoo River which had to be filled with sand before a bridge could be started, that area of I-96 will not be completed until June, 1964. I-96 traffic will use US-31 from the interchange three miles north of Saugatuck to south of Douglas until then.

In other construction work, crewmen are presently putting the deck on the overpass at the US-31 and US-31 bypass. Sidewalks and rails will next be added. The three bridges in the field southwest of there are still in their substructure stage. One still has no beams.

Work was also begun on a $93,000 resurfacing job Tuesday morning on a mile and a half of M-40, beginning at and going south of the US-31 bypass. The reconstruction work is being done to minimize present maintenance costs of that area, according to Kasip.

The poor material which exists in the present pavement will be replaced and the sand-gravel-stone gradations underlying the road will be made uniform. Because the moisture content of each is different, Kasip said, the road buckles in cold weather. Contractor is James Harris of Allegan.

New Seminary Building Set To Open Soon

A new $1.3 million Augustinian Preparatory Seminary building is scheduled to be partly ready for use Sept. 15 when about 120 students will arrive at the Felt estate on 138th Ave. near Lake Michigan. Approximately half the building will be ready for use for the students Sept. 15, despite a carpenter's union strike earlier this summer.

Elzinga & Volkers crewmen will continue working into November on the remaining part of the building while Seminary students will live, eat and study in the other half of the building.

Ready for use Sept. 15 will be a recreation room which will double temporarily as a chapel, one two-story dormitory, the dining room and kitchens and several classrooms. The gymnasium, another two-story dormitory and a library will be completed in November. The chapel will be built sometime in the future.

About 120 students will arrive this fall from throughout the Midwest Province, an area stretching from Detroit to the Rocky Mountains. About 40 students attended school at the Felt estate last year. Others for the priesthood attended school in Chicago.

The new building is planned to eventually house 400, or all high school students in the Midwest Province who will be preparing for the priesthood. The one-story building has been planned so additional stories may be added as enrollment increases.

The building — really a series of buildings connected with a corridor, was planned to divide the students into smaller groups for disciplinary problems and to create the atmosphere of a small school, with the added advantages of a larger school.

The Felt mansion which priests and students have been using for the last 14 years, will eventually be turned over to brothers of the St. Augustine order.

Carousel Mountain Facilities Gradually Being Developed

Final grading for the road to the uncompleted ski lodge of Caroussel Mountain, the new recreation-resort development in the Macatawa Hills area, is expected to be completed this week.

Footings for the lodge have been placed and the ski runs have been cut. Because the work is being done simultaneously, no completion date can be set but Norman Archer, co-owner of the development, hopes it will be in operation by Dec. 1.

Max Henkel, publicity director of "Carefree Days in West Michigan," a magazine which is published by the West Michigan Tourist Association, has been obtaining material on Caroussel Mountain to appear in the winter edition.

Archer is working with the tourist committee of the Holland Chamber of Commerce on plans to stage a Winter Carnival this winter. William H. Vande Water, Executive Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce will work directly with Archer on the project. A date for the proposed carnival will be set after completion of the development.

Archer hopes to be ready for Tulip Time 1964 with floral plantings in the woods, places to picnic and the chair life which picnickers may ride to the top of Caroussel Mountain.

A revolving restaurant designed like a carousel will be atop one of the hills. Restaurant patrons will take the chair lift to the dining facilities where they will be able to get a "bird's eye" view of the surrounding area.
